

SIXTH SUNDAY OF EASTER

MAY 6, 2018

Jesus said to his disciples:

"As the Father loves me, so I also love you. Remain in my love.
If you keep my commandments, you will remain in my love, just as I have kept my Father's commandments and remain in his love.

"I have told you this so that my joy may be in you and your joy might be complete.
This is my commandment: love one another as I love you."

MISSION APPEAL: MAY 12-13

One Family
In Mission

THE SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE FAITH

"No undertaking, perhaps, is so pleasing to God as supporting the Missionary work of the Church. All who are reckoned Christians or boast of that name must contribute their support either by their prayers or by an offering according to their means."

—Pope Saint John Paul II

For the Mission Appeal this year, we will have a special visit from Father Santhosh George, OSST, who is a missionary priest serving in India and a member of the Trinitarians (Holy Trinity Fathers). Next weekend is a unique opportunity to pray and make sacrifices for the spreading of the Good News to every heart in the world.

A separate, second collection will be taken next Sunday for the missionary work of the Trinitarians. Donations by check should be made payable to Our Lady of Perpetual Help Parish. Thank you for your generosity!

Learn more about the work of the Trinitarians at www.trinitarians.org.

A special thank you to Fr. Santhosh George for assisting in our parish needs during his visit (May 7-13). He will be celebrating the Sacrament of Anointing of the Sick after all the weekend Masses on May 12-13th. All are welcome.

Mother's Day

In honor of the Blessed Virgin Mary, the Mother of God, the Protectress of the Unborn, and the Patroness of the Knights of Columbus, the Our Lady of Perpetual Help Knights of Columbus will offer their prayers and, in gratitude, distribute a rose to the Mothers of the parish after the morning Masses on Mother's Day.

THE FAMILY: THE FOUNDATION OF SOCIETY

Why should the State and society do anything for the family?

The family, by its very nature, makes important contributions to society that often go quite unnoticed and unappreciated. The obligation of society and the State to do something for families, too, follows from the fact that the family is the smallest, indispensable unit of society. This is where governmental family policy begins. A nation necessarily depends on potential parents to decide to have children; the State, however, can in no way coerce this decision; it must be made with complete freedom by the citizens. The State thus places its own future in the hands of its citizens, who are entitled to freedom.

What can the State and society do for families?

First, it is important for both society and the State to acknowledge the family as something special and central and therefore to protect and support its unique character. This starts with strengthening the home life of the family, but it also includes respect for human life in every phase, especially for the unborn.

When we talk about the State protecting and supporting the family, this can never mean that society or the State, for economic or ideological reasons, takes over or even takes away duties originally belonging to the family and thus narrows its social dimension; instead, the goal of family policy measures, in keeping with the principle of subsidiarity, must be to enable families to perform their own tasks suitably.

What is meant specifically by "family policy in keeping with the principle of subsidiarity"?

An example: In keeping with the principle of subsidiarity, it cannot be the State's task to raise children, because that would take away from parents a task that has belonged to them from the beginning. Rather, in the given circumstances (living conditions, work, and educational opportunities), the State should give families all the necessary assistance. Here it is important to preserve real freedom of choice, for instance, with regard to parental cooperation in dividing up the work of caring for the family and earning a living. The special function of the family in communicating knowledge and the formation of the children can be replaced neither through day care and schools nor through other societal groups, although these institutions can help to support and supplement parental education. The principle of subsidiarity emphasizes at the same time the autonomy of every person and of families. This means that families themselves can and should become involved in political and societal institutions and also join together to stand up for their rights and to strengthen them.
